NDA'S 5-HOUR BIHAR

Modi ji's late mother. Their shamelessness is such that not a single senior Congress leader has apologised for the incident so far. This shows the arrogance of the Congress and its alliance partners. People of Bihar will never forget those who hurled abuse at the deceased mother of the PM.

JD(U) national general secretary and state minister Ashok Choudhary said the bandh was a symbolic protest aimed at stressing the need for decorum in public life. "Democracy is all about dialogue, and foul language should not be used even for opponents. This must be ensured at public functions. Though people may speak in a manner they wish while in private," he said.

Deputy CM Samrat Choudhary, in a post on X, wrote, "The disrespectful comment made against the late mother of PM Modi has hurt the soul of the entire nation. This is not just an insult to one mother, but to every mother in the country. In protest against this indecent behaviour, the women's wing has taken to the streets. Today, the entire country is united for the dignity of the mother and respect for women.

HOT MIC CATCHES XI

"In a few decades, as biotechnology continues to develop, human organs will continue to be transplanted and people will become younger and perhaps even achieve immortality," the interpreter said.

{ FROM PAGE 1 }

Xi appeared to break into a slight smile as the interpreter spoke, turning his head once to look at Putin briefly.

The live feed then switched to an overhead view of the viewing platform on historic Tiananmen Gate, but the audio from the walking leaders continued.

A voice that sounded like Xi said, "Some predict that within this century, it may be possible ... ." Then the audio paused briefly. When it came back, someone can be heard saying at much lower volume, " ... may be able to live up to 150 years old." The second phrase follows naturally from the first one in Chinese, but it's not clear whether the second one is also Xi or someone else.

A translator then said in Russian, "There are forecasts that in this world a person will live up to 100." The feed was provided by the parade media centre to international news agencies, including The Associated Press.

Xi presided over a parade that marked the 80th anniversary of the end of World War II. The fighter jets, missiles and other military hardware were a display of strength intended in part to show the progress the country has made under Communist Party rule.

Later in the day, Putin said at a news conference that Xi had brought up life expectancy while they were walking to the parade.

"The chairman mentioned this," he said, referring to the Chinese leader. He added that former Italian Prime Minister Silvio Berlusconi had actively promoted the topic in the past.

"Modern health and medical technologies, surgical procedures connected with organ replacements and so on give humanity reason to hope that an active life can continue differently than now," Putin said. "The average age varies across countries, of course, but life expectancy is significantly increasing."

relayed Putin's remarks to Xi.

"With the... development of biotechnology, human organs can be continuously transplanted, people could get younger as they grow older, and may even become immortal," Putin said, according to the translator.

Xi then spoke again in Mandarin as the camera cut away: "Predictions are, in this century, it may be... possible to live to 150 years old."

Putin confirmed the exchange during a press briefing on Wednesday.

"Ah, I think it was when we were going to the parade that the Chairman spoke about this," he told reporters, referring to Xi.

"Modern means -- both health improvement and medical means, and then even all kinds of surgical ones related to organ replacement -- allow humanity to hope that active life will continue not as it does today," Putin added.

The Chinese and Russian leaders, both 72, have not expressed any intention of stepping down.

Nitish lays foundation stones of ₹1,200 crore development projects

PATNA: Continuing his Samvad programme, Chief Minister Nitish Kumar on Thursday interacted with party workers and women in the run-up to the assembly polls.

At a programme organised at Bintoliya in Saran district, Kumar urged women to move forward, assuring them that the government would extend all possible help. On the occasion, he also laid the foundation stone for projects worth ₹1,200 crore, including road widening, a power sub-station, and sports-related schemes.

Kumar interacted with women associated with Jeevika groups, encouraging them to make the most of Jeevika's newly opened bank facilities. "These initiatives will ensure better roads, uninterrupted electricity, and improved sports infrastructure for the people of the district," he said.

Addressing party workers, the CM highlighted his government's achievements while criticising previous dispensations. "You all know that the government before 2005 did nothing for Bihar's development. The situation was very bad then. Since the NDA government was formed, we have been committed to development and establishing the rule of law. Rapid progress is being made in every sector," he said.

Kumar also spoke about recent welfare measures. Under the Social Security Pension Scheme, the monthly pension for the elderly, disabled, and widows has been raised from ₹400 to ₹1,100, benefiting 1.12 crore people. Recalling the past, he said electricity supply before 2005 was "pathetic," with rural areas receiving little to no power and even Patna getting only about eight hours of supply daily. "By 2018, we ensured electricity reached every household," he asserted.
